PENOBSCOT SS., Court of Insolvency

Notice is hereby given that a petition has, on this thirty-first day of January, A. D. 1883 been presented to said Court for said county by Adelbert L. Orr of Milton, in the County of Penobscot, praying that he may be decreed to have a full discharge from all his debts provable under the Insolvent Acts of the state of Maine, approved February 21st, 1878, and the amendments thereof, and upon said petition it is ordered by said Court that a hearing be had upon the same before said Court, at the Probate Court Room in Bangor, in said County of Penobscot, on Thursday, the fifteenth day of February, A. D. 1883, at ten o'clock in the forenoon; and that notice thereof be published in the Bangor Daily Whig & Courier, a newspaper published in said County of Penobscot, once a week for four successive weeks, the last publication to be two days at least before the day of hearing; and that all creditors who have proved their debts, and other persons interested, may appear at said place and time and show cause, if any they have, why a discharge should not be granted said Debtor, according to the prayer of his petition.

Attest: AMBROSE G. FLINT, Register of said Court for said County of Penobscot.

AYER'S
cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, for all scrofulous humors, it has proved its virtues when all else failed. Its cures are the talk of the people everywhere. Its sales are the wonder of the trade. Its power over disease is the marvel of the medical world. Its cost is less than that of any other blood purifier. Its good qualities are known everywhere. Its cures are everywhere recorded. Its use is universal. Its sale is unbounded. Its merits are unquestioned. Its power to cure the worst forms of disease is unfailing. Its composition is the best that skill and knowledge can devise. Its effects are healthy, purifying and invigorating. Its tendency is to restore to health and vigor those who are prostrated by the disease and suffering which it cures. Its ingredients are the most powerful and healthful vegetable alteratives that are known to the medical profession. Its cures are the most decisive and astonishing of any medicine in the world. Its cures are so numerous and so extraordinary as to excite the belief that it is a specific for the diseases it cures. Its cures are so well known to the people of this community that we need not publish them in this place. Its cures are so well known to the people of this community that we need not publish them in this place. Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, Guardian of Arthur S. Boardman, minor heir of Benjamin H. Boardman, late of Bangor, in said County, deceased, respectfully represents that said minor is seized and possessed of the following described Real Estate, viz: One half part in common and undivided of tenement No. Twenty-nine (29) and the lot on which it stands and connected therewith, situate on Third Street, in said Bangor, being one tenement of a double tenement house, and the interest of said minor descended to him as heir at law of his father said Benjamin H. Boardman subject to the widow's right of Dower therein, bounding the same described in a deed recorded in the Registry of Deeds for said County.

That it would be for the benefit of said minor that said Real Estate should be sold, and the proceeds thereof put out at interest, or otherwise used for his benefit. She therefore prays that license may be granted her to sell and convey the above described Real Estate at public or private sale, according to the requirement of law.

NO USE FOR THEM.

Concerning Certain Relics of the Past—Dogs that have had their Day.

George Stephenson's "Rocket," and the magnificent locomotives of to-day, are built upon the same general principle, yet the machine with which the great engineer astonished his age, is interesting now only as an illustration of the beginning of the invention. There were plasters with holes in them long before BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, surprised both the public and the physicians; and the triumph of the Capcine is founded upon the partial successes, or the utter failures of its predecessors. Everything of value in the old porous plaster is retained in the Capcine; but at this point all comparison ends, and our last begins. For example:

The old plasters lacked the power to do more than to impart slight, temporary relief in cases easy of treatment; the Capcine penetrates the system and permanently cures the troubles for which it is recommended.

The old plasters depended for any good results they might attain, upon an accident of their makers and the naked faith of their wearers; the Benson's reaches its ends by means of the scientific combination of the rare medicinal ingredients which it contains.

In brief, the old plaster, like Stephenson's discarded engine, are switched off the track, while the Benson's goes on its way winning golden opinions from all sorts of people.

Not in this very fact lies the leading danger to the people who buy and use this reliable and scientific remedy. Hypocrisy is the tribute vice pays to virtue. Imitation is the concession inferior make to success. Benson's Plasters are plundered in name and style.

Beware of swindles. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents. Sold by all druggists. Benson, Johnson, Chemists, New York.

THE PUREST AND BEST

Remedy Ever Made.--It is compounded from Hops, Malt, Buchu, Mandrake, and Dandelion

The oldest, best, most renowned and valuable medicine in the world, and in addition it contains all the best and most effective curative properties of all other remedies, being the greatest liver regulator, blood purifier, and health restoring agent on earth.

It gives new life and vigor to the aged and infirm. To clergymen, lawyers, literary men, ladies, and all when sedentary employments cause irregularities of the Blood, Stomach, Bowels, or Kidneys, or who require an appetizer, tonic, and mild stimulant, it is invaluable, being highly curative, tonic and stimulating, without being intoxicating.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are, or what the disease or ailment is, use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick, but if you only feel bad or miserable use the bitters at once. It may save your life. Hundreds have been saved by so doing, at a moderate cost. Ask your druggist or physician. Do not suffer yourself or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop Bitters.

If you have tameness in the loins, with frequent pains and aches, numbness of the thigh; scanty, painful and frequent discharge of urine, filled with pus, and which will turn red by standing; a voracious appetite and unquenchable thirst; harsh and dry skin; clammy tongue, often darkly furred, swollen and inflamed gums; dropsical swelling of the limbs; frequent attacks of blockers; inability to void the urine, and great fatigue on exertion, you are suffering from some form of Kidney or Urinary Complaint, such as URINARY DISEASE of the Kidneys, stone or inflammation of the bladder, gravel and renal calculi, diabetes, urinary stricture and retention of the urine, and Hop Bitters is the only remedy that will permanently cure you.

Remember, Hop Bitters is no rile, drugged, drunken nostrum, but the purest and best medicine made, and no person or family should be without it.

Don't risk any of the highly landed stuff with testimonials of great cures, but ask your neighbor, druggist or physician what Hop Bitters has and can do for you and test it.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot.

The undersigned, administrator of the estate of Eliza F. W. Cobb, late of Passadumkeag, in said County, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are not sufficient to pay her just debts and charges of administration.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him power to sell by license at public or private sale, and convey the whole of said real estate described and mentioned in said deceased (including the reversion of the husband's dower therein) as the residue would be greatly depreciated by a sale of any portion, viz.:

All of the real estate of which said Eliza F. McCobb died so seized and possessed, including her late homestead, situate in said Passadumkeag, containing ninety-nine acres more or less, and being the same premises which said deceased received of said Eliza, by will, One from William H. and Walter F. Severance, dated April 23, 1876, recorded in the Registry of Deeds for Penobscot County, Vol. 298, page 305, and the other from John W. Dennis, dated May 2, 1870, and recorded in said Registry in Vol. 329, page 61, in which deeds and the record thereto reference is made for a description. Five previous to date of deed, exception of said charges of administration.

Said real estate is the same described in deeds referred to in the Registry of Deeds of said County, Vol. 329, pages 60 and 61.

The New York State Board of Health, at a recent meeting, examined 319 articles of food, of which sixty were found to be adulterated with unwholesome substances.

President Andrew D. White, of Cornell, says that smart boys show up better at examinations than smart girls, but that the girls, if you strike the average, are the better, more industrious students.

During the year 1882, Germany, including Luxemburg, produced a total of 3,170,357 tons of raw iron, as against 2,914,009 tons in 1881, 2,729,038 in 1880, and 2,226,587 in 1879. This is due to the fact that Germany has returned to the policy of protection.

Justice Joseph P. Bradley was in Paterson, N. J., on Sunday as the guest of his son-in-law, Henry V. Butler. A paragraph which has been extensively circulated to the effect that Justice Bradley was about to resign his seat on the Supreme Bench in favor of Secretary Frelinghuysen, was shown to the Justice in the course of a conversation, and he said it was the first time that he had even heard of the report, and that it was utterly without foundation.

The Missionary Conference held at Calcutta at the beginning of the year determined to attack the practice, which is almost universal among families of high caste, of marrying Indian children in early infancy. The missionaries will endeavor to procure the passage of a law which shall make such a marriage null unless approved by the girl when she comes to years of discretion. They would thus in all cases interpret the marriage ceremony, as it is called, as a mere betrothal, and leave the parties free either to ratify it by a later marriage or to rescind the contract.

The Nihilist Executive Committee has addressed a memorandum to the Czar and the Russian Cabinet, insisting upon the following constitutional reforms before the coronation at Moscow: A representative Assembly elected by universal suffrage; provincial self-government by freely elected provincial boards; the free ownership of land by all classes of the people; freedom of conscience, of the press, of public meeting and of association; the transformation of the standing military forces into a territorial army. The document threatens, if these reforms be not accelerated, to revert to the means of intimidation previously employed.

Very interesting experiments were made on the 6th inst. in the workshops of the Northern Railway of France at Paris on the system of Marcel Deprez, for transporting electrical forces over great distances. A dynamo-electric machine transported a force equal to about three-horse power a distance of 20 kilometres by means of a single ordinary iron wire, and afterward ten-horse power over a distance of 35 kilometres. A kilometre is 3280 feet. Hitherto it has not been thought possible to transport a force beyond two kilometres with a minimum loss of 50 per cent., though thick copper wires were used as conductors. Many eminent persons attended the experiments, among them M. de Freycinet, himself a distinguished engineer.

The present Legislature of Indiana is doing its best to insure a Republican victory in the State next year. Its disregard of public sentiment on the temperance question, the making of one of the most offensive and blatant copperheads of the war a leader in the upper House, and the undisguised determination to grasp all the spoils within reach, have alienated the independent element which stood ready to support the claims of ex-Senator McDonald for the Presidency. It is believed also that ex-Governor Hendricks has not only viewed these proceedings with complacency but has thrown his influence in their favor in order, by making the State doubtful, to destroy the chance of any other Indianian than himself receiving the honor of a Presidential nomination from the Democratic party.

Congressman Blackburn has received some severe treatment from his political opponents during his public career, but he probably cared little for this so long as he was allowed to pose as one of the statesmen of the Democratic party. He is now, however, having his pretensions in this line rudely punctured by his own party papers. In discussing the merits of Mr. Carlisle and Mr. Blackburn the St. Louis Republican says: "It would be unfortunate to have two candidates for the Speakership from the same State. The interests of the Democracy require that one of them shall withdraw—and with all due deference to Mr. Blackburn's somewhat turgid pretensions, he must permit us to say that he is" that one. Mr. Blackburn has not developed the ability or the character he gave promise of ten years ago. He reached his best several years since, and it is a disappointment."

Professor Paul H. Chadbourne, who died in New York, yesterday afternoon, has been known for many years, says the Lewiston Journal, as an active worker in the cause of education, and his death will be much regretted by all interested in the advance of improved educational work. He has been a man of original ideas in the line of educational progress and has written and lectured to good purpose in stimulating teachers and educators to the highest notions of their calling. He was a native of this State, in which he was born in 1823, and the older graduates of Bowdoin, those whose classes date back to 1860-61, will remember him as an enthusiastic and genial instructor of natural history and chemistry in that college. In 1867 he was chosen President of the University of Wisconsin, and removed west. In 1872, on the retirement of President Hopkins from the presidency of Williams, Prof. Chadbourne was chosen as his successor, a position he retained until two years ago. His last office has been that of President of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. His chief published works are a volume on "Natural Theology" and "Instincts in Animals and Men."

FREE TRADE BUGLE BLASTS.

[Philadelphia North American.]

Naturally enough the parties who wind the free trade horn warble sweetly so long as the policy of obstruction to tariff revision seems likely to delay if not utterly to defeat the measure pending in the House. But no sooner does the prospect of tariff revision brighten—and it has brightened within a few days—than these same parties wind their horns with great vigor. The blasts blown by at least two of the New York free-trade organs within forty-eight hours have been vigorous and prolonged. These gentlemen do not relish the idea of a just reduction of the imposts on products, and the bill is roundly denounced as a measure that will not afford relief. We are told, on the one hand, that every man, woman and child in the United States was levied upon by the present tariff in the sum of seven dollars each, while local and internal taxes raised the taxation per capita to fourteen dollars. And this is the stuff and nonsense which journals claiming to be leaders point off upon their readers as practical facts, which, of course, ought to be recognized by the people so oppressed by inordinate taxation.

This beatiful result is reached by dividing the revenue total from customs duties by the total population. It is assumed that the duties levied on a product are added to the real cost of production, and in that way the consumer is taxed for government use in the sum of the duties. It seems too absurd to spend a moment in refuting so unfair and unfounded an assertion. As no argument is brought forward to sustain the assertion, we need only put in a square denial, and leave the charge and the denial to stand upon their respective merits. We may say, however, that putting a product on the free list has never worked a reduction in price to the consumer anything like the sum of the duty abated. Take any article placed on the free list—tea, coffee, quinine, or any other in which the general public is interested as consumers—and it will be found that taking off the duty has not given any relief to the consumer that can be felt and appreciated. No sooner was the duty taken off coffee than the foreign coffee-grower and the jobber clubbed and put the chief part of the difference in their pockets. Substantially the same thing happened when quinine was put on the free list. The jobber takes his turn now, but John Smith and William Jones, who are gaunt and yellow with malaria, pay exactly what they paid before for their prescriptions.

Only one reason exists for noticing such trashy statements as that quoted. The object of the statement is to breed discontent among the working men. We do not choose to sit in silence while such outrageous misconduction of the masses is indulged by unscrupulous men. The people are told that they are taxed in the total sum of the internal taxes. Is that true? What is taxed chiefly? Rum and tobacco. Both are luxuries, and the man who consumes most of them pays the most tax. Let the guzzlers and the smokers and chewers and the snuffers pay the tax. The more they use of either the worse they are off anyhow. Nobody is oppressed by such taxes, or at least nobody is forcibly oppressed. Let the taxes be reduced to meet the necessary outgo, but do not lie to the people of the United States in order to divert them into free trade.

Some idea of the amount of crime committed by the James brothers and the gang led by them may be conceived from the information that requisitions from no less than five States are waiting to be served upon the surviving brother, if he escapes Missouri justice, and that there are some dozen different indictments for murder and highway robbery in his own State.

The starfish likes the oysters that grow in the sound along the Connecticut coast, and has eaten up several valuable deposits. One firm has lost $100,000 worth from the beds at Charles Island, another lost $30,000 this year, and the havoc in that vicinity is terrible. The star-fish can be dredged up if his presence is known, and the oystermen now watch for him so as to receive him as soon as he puts in an appearance. One planter raised 75 bushels of starfish from his beds in a single day. If he had not detected and captured them, they would have eaten $40,000 worth of oysters during the next four weeks.

Death, like disaster, has been busy since this year came in. The first six weeks of 1883 present a remarkable necrology. Read the names—in the United States, ex-Senator Morrill, of Maine; ex-Governors Marshall Jewell, Davis, of Texas, and William E. Smith, of Wisconsin; Charles R. Thorne, Jr., the actor; William E. Dodge, the Christian philanthropist; Clark Mills, the sculptor, and Dr. George M. Beard, the famous neurologist. Abroad, in the first hours of the new year, Lepe Gambetta, the only great Frenchman of the decade, and then Doré, the artist, and Wagner, the composer.

Amount Saved.

It is not the amount that a person earns or receives that goes to make the total of his property after manyer years; it is the amount saved.

From observations of men for the past sixteen years in this respect, I am convinced that many do not save, unless in a recess compelled to. On this ground I have the best of reasons for urging the note for one of life and endowment policies, issued by the Connecticut Mutual Life Ins. Co., even if it were not the fact that death is a loss ever ready to devour unpromised gains.

Cash paid for life policies after 10 years. These values exceed those required by any State law, and are printed in the policy, thus making the most perfect contract ever offered in Life Insurance.

BE CHANDLER-GORRINGE CORRESPONDENCE.

A Reference to Lattey's Advocacy of Free Ships.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21. The Chandler-Gorringe correspondence as published shows that Secretary Chandler wrote Commander Gorringe in reference to Gorringe's advocacy of free ships in a recent issue of the New York Evening Post, advised him he had no business or official notice of the naval professional subordinate Gorringe replied that he had no other employment, except as consulting engineer for H. McK. Twombley, of which the department had received notice. The Secretary answered that this reply is satisfactory, but this inquiry arose on the supposition that he (Gorringe) was in the employ of foreign interests, and says there is no objection to the expression by an officer of his unprejudiced opinions. In a letter dated February 14th, Commander Gorringe warmly resents the imputation cast upon him, and says any reflection which conveys or was intended to convey, even by innuendo an imputation that I have ever expressed purchased opinions in favor of any employment or occupation whatever or not American, is a wrong and injurious slander upon me, against the very oath to which I have the honor to adhere.

Later and the letter says: Have I a right to know who it is that has made this suggestion? And since the chief head of the department has officially informed me that such a suggestion has not been made have I any alternate than to respectfully and urgently request that the suggestion itself and all evidence presented to the department in support of it on which the department based its official action of February 5th and 10th be communicated to me without delay, and opportunity afforded me of meeting the accusation? An unblemished record of twenty-two years service is at stake and in war entitled me, I think to at much protection from the Department.

FIRE IN A PENITENTIARY.

A Mutiny Among the Convicts.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 23 Private advices from Jefferson City, Mo, say a serious fire is raging in the penitentiary. The report is that a mutiny took place in the horse collar and harness shops of Jacob Strauss & Co, and that Dan Taylor, a second term convict set fire to the shop. The fire department rushed to the building, but as fast as they laid the hose the convicts cut it, preventing the engines from doing any effective work for a time, but the guards finally overpowered the mutineers and locked them up in the blind cell. Meanwhile the fire spread to the adjoining shop of Gesecke and that of the Standard Shoe Company and they are now burning.

Later.

The fire is now under control and the rebellious convicts overpowered and locked up. The total loss will reach $300,000.

THE FLOODED DISTRICTS.

Work of the Relief Committee.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 23 The Relief Committee are receiving large contributions from other cities, for the flooded districts. The amount thus far received aggregates $25,000, of which $5,000 is from Boston. The agents of the Board of Trade Relief Committee returned to-day from a trip south. At New Albany, where they distributed a boat load of provisions they found the most complete destitution among lodalities. In Leavenworth not a single house escaped water.

BOILER EXPLOSION.

One Man Killed and Two Injured.

BOSTON, Feb. 23. The boiler holating engine at Phillips & Co's coal wharf, South Boston, exploded this afternoon. Joseph Gookin, the engineer, and brother of Sylvie and Richard Gookin, professional oarsmen, and himself of considerable prominence in local boating circles, was instantly killed. James Gorman and Charles Burley, two young men, were very seriously injured, and were taken to the city hospital.

SAD LOSS OF LIFE.

Twenty-Two Persons Drowned.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 23. Twenty two persons were drowned yesterday by the wreck of a steamer on the Bosphorus.

XLVII CONGRESS—Second Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. Mr. Dawes submitted the conference report on the Indian Appropriation bill, which was agreed to. The Senate then resumed consideration of the Naval Appropriation bill. The pending question was on amendment offered by Mr. Rollins, providing for the Board to scrutinize the active list of the Navy and select a certain number of officers of each grade to be retained in the active list, the remainder to be considered supernumaries. The point of order was raised yesterday that the amendment was inadmissable.

Mr. Anthony, from the Committee on Naval Affairs offered an amendment appropriating $200,000 to enable the Secretary of the Navy to build an experimental gun-boat.

Mr. McPherson discussing the amendment alluded to the presence of the Secretary of the Navy in the Senate chamber the other day in conversation with Mr. Anthony, and went on to make an attack upon the Secretary as one who was at home in the lobby.

Mr. Rollins said he heard Mr. McPherson's remarks with great surprise, that the Senator's criticism upon the Secretary was unjust and ungenerous in the extreme, and so hoped it would not be repeated.

Mr. Hale raised the point of order that the amendments proposed new legislation and the chair sustained the point of order and ruled out the amendment.

The third section of the Naval Appropriation bill, authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to sell vessels which have been struck from the Navy Register, was ruled out and the bill passed. The District of Columbia Appropriation bill was then taken up.

The Senate passed the District Appropriation bill. Mr. Allison reported the Legislative Appropriation bill and gave notice that he would ask the Senate to dispose of it to-morrow. The report of the Conference Committee on the Consular Appropriation bill was agreed to. The Senate then resumed consideration of the Utah bill, the pending question being on Mr. Blair's amendment making the prohibition of voting apply only to persons tried and convicted of polygamy or bigamy, instead of to all females as on the bill; lost.

Mr. Ingalls moved to amend section 7 of the bill so as to prohibit voting by women in any territory. Mr. Edmunds opposed the amendment, and after a discussion a vote was taken but no quorum voted. After a call of the Senate Mr. Edmunds moved to instruct the Sergeant-at-Arms to request immediate attendance of absent Senators; agreed to. From this hour till 10 o'clock, the time of the Senate was consumed in roll calls and motions to adjourn and to lay the order on the table. Finally on motion of Mr. Edmunds the Senate adjourned.

House.

Mr. Robeson called up as a privileged question the consideration of the Pond rule reported yesterday from the Committee on Rules. The rule was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Butterworth the Senate amendments to the Army Appropriation bill was not concurred in, and Messrs Butterworth, Burrows and Ellis were appointed conferees on the part of the House.

On motion of Mr. Ferry the Senate amendments to the Fortification Appropriation bill was nonconcurred in, and Messrs. Ferry, Kirkham and Ryan were appointed conferees. The House at 11.40 went into Committee on the Whole on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill.

Amendments were adopted appropriating $10,000 for the extension of the House library, granting a month's extra salary to employees of the House, approving the modification of the treaty and agreement made with the Sioux Indians under the last sundry civil act, appropriating $200,000 to enable the Secretary of the Interior to enter upon the execution of said treaty, and reserving to railroad companies the right of way for depot grounds, etc., which have been paid for by them under agreement with those Indians. The committee then rose and reported the bill to the House. It being rumored that the friends of the Bonded Spirits bill had organized their forces with the intention of calling up that measure at the night session, the House on motion of Mr. Hiscock, without passing the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, at 5 20 P. M., adjourned.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Star Route Trial.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. The Star Route trial was resumed this morning. Kerdell took the stand and made a few minor corrections in his former testimony. Ingersoll then resumed the cross-examination. Referring to the interview with Dorsey, at Willard's Hotel, July 12th, 1882, the witness said they proceeded to Dorsey's room when Dorsey locked the door and commenced the conversation very abruptly. He referred to Kerdell's going over to the government, and said: "But you reckon without your host. I have got you in my grasp and I propose to hold you there. I can send you to the penitentiary, for perjury. I have got those letters and I propose to publish them. Now, I have written out what I want, I want you to go and copy it. Take it to a notary public and swear to it. I can have you arrested before night if I want."

After making the affidavit on the day following the witness went to Dorsey's room at the hotel. Bosler was there with Dorsey. Did not say anything to Bosler about his being imprisoned in that room on the day before nor did he tell him how he came to make the affidavit. Dorsey read the paper and directed the witness to write in the word "statement," which he did. Dorsey then wrote in the words "and other." Striking a match Dorsey then burned the pencil draft of the affidavit.

Mr. Ingersoll called the attention of the Court to the statement made by the witness Wednesday affecting Mr. Belford, and proceeded to exonerate that gentleman from dishonesty in his dealings with Dorsey. No payments such as had been sworn to by the witness were ever made to Belford or Tyner or Mr. Turner. Adjourned to Monday.

MASSACHUSETTS.

A Loose Way of Doing Business.

BOSTON, Feb. 23. The Journal says in connection with a suit brought to-day at Dedham to recover $42,000 from the bondsmen of J. P. Heatey, deceased, for many years Corporation Counsel of the city of Boston, it is discovered that his affairs are in a most inextricable tangle. He was trustee and executor for a number of large estates, but has kept no separate account of his trust. When the legatees endeavored to settle his own estate and arrange his trust funds they found the former bankrupt and the latter in the aggregate at least $100,000 short. No dishonesty is alleged or thought of, but a general looseness in keeping his accounts, or a lack of financial ability has caused the discrepancy. Another suit than those mentioned above, has been brought for $30,000.

CONDENSED DESPATCHES.

Prof. Chadbourne died in New York yesterday.

The Maverick Rifles left Portland in the 1 o'clock regular train on the Eastern railroad, yesterday, for Boston, having been escorted to the depot by the Mechanic Blues. Both companies escorted Governor Robie and staff to the Augusta train.

Thursday afternoon Mr. Ira Merrill, of China, Me, 82 years of age, while breaking snow, in that town, was struck by a snow-plow receiving injuries from which he died in fifteen minutes.

The President has approved the Japanese Indemnity Fund bill.

THE WEATHER.

War Dept., Office Chief Signal Officer, Washington, D. C., Feb. 24—(1 A. M.)

Indications.

For New England: Fair weather during the day followed by increased cloudiness and snow by Sunday morning; northeast to southeast winds and lower barometer; slight fall followed by slowly rising temperature.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Parnell's Reply to Forster.

LONDON, Feb. 23. There was much excitement in Commons at the opening of the session this afternoon, as it was expected Parnell would speak in answer to the charges made against him by Forster, yesterday. Parnell said the utmost he desired to do was to make his position clear to the Irish people at home and abroad. Forster ought to be ashamed in traducing him. He declined to reply to Forster's questions and charged that gentleman with having disclosed secrets of his (Parnell's) associates. If Forster had believed the article published in the Irish World was likely to cause crime, why had he not stopped the circulation of that paper? He compared the responsibility of Forster, who had read the articles and believed what the result would be, to that of himself who never read them though they were now brought against him.

Parnell said that he had been challenged to defend himself, but he had nothing to defend himself from. He occupied a better position in the eyes of the Irish than Forster did in England. Parnell also analyzed the evidence of Carey at the examination of the Irish prisoners in Dublin, which he said was not a statement of fact but a belief or hearsay. The evidence in reference to the source of the murder fund, he said, rested on the fact that some men while in prison had received checks from the sustentation fund of the Land League. Such aid had been given to thousands of prisoners. Forster's animus was due to the fact that he had attempted to obtain a promise from him, (Parnell) but had failed and had lost his office. The present officials in Ireland were manifestly unfitted administer the crime's act.

Trevelyan, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in reply to Parnell proceeded to vindicate the policy of the government in Ireland. Since the present government there had been commissioned to suppress crime the number of murders had been reduced from three monthly to one in the last four and a half months. The only policy for Ireland was to say exactly what the government meant to do and then do it. He regretted that Parnell had not made his position clearer.

Gorst's amendment to the address in reply to a speech from the Throne was distasteful to Earl Spencer, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland who, he said himself and would, if carried, lead to their resignations, as well as to the resignation of the Cabinet.

Gorst's amendment was rejected. The Parnellites abstained from voting and Messrs. McCoan and Blake, the Home Rulers, voted with the majority.

More than fifty years ago, when I was a boy and suffered from a cold or any throat or lung affection, I took Downs' Elixir, and considered it a sovereign remedy for all such difficulties. And from its frequent use in all the subsequent years I have seen no reason to qualify my opinion of this standard remedy for those diseases which are so fatal in our climate.

AN UNRIVALLED HAIR DRESSING,
Producing as rich and Cleanly Appearance as if Nature Alone had Imparted it.
BURNETT'S COCOAINE is the best and cheapest Hair Dressing—kills dandruff, allays irritation, and promotes a vigorous and healthy growth of the hair. No other compound produces these results.

The superiority of BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS consists in their perfect purity and great strength. They are warranted free from the poisonous oils and acids which enter into the composition of many of the factitious fruit flavors now in the market. STT&w4w feb3

"Horse-car conductors," says a spiteful writer, "should always be chosen with a view to personal courage, because 'None but the brave deserve the fare.'" I is presumptuously true that "None but meritorious preparations deserve success." Everybody knows the nature and effects of Catarrh. It is one of the most loathsome maladies, and has been pronounced incurable. Ely's Cream Balm may be described as a gigantic tidal wave which has submerged that theory. This Balm is a pleasant, popular, perfect preparation, and a certain cure for Catarrh. It is not a liquid or snuff, and is easily applied. "I had Catarrh for fifteen years," said C. Z. Warren, Rutland, Vt., "with distressing pains over my eyes, gradually the disease worked down upon my lungs. Ely's Cream Balm cured me." All who use it speak in the same grateful strain. eod&w2w feb15

Austin lived in this city until within a few years, when he moved to New York State and took up his residence in a town on the Hudson river. It is said the body was not recovered till three weeks after the suicide.

PRESENTATION. The Journal says: The Odd Fellows of Belfast have sent to the Rev. Mr. Goodenough, at Santa Clara, Cal., a very handsome present as a slight token of the esteem in which that gentleman is held by his brothers in the fraternity. The present is a combination collar and jewel, indicative of his rank—Past Grand and Past Chief Patriarch. The material is silk scarlet, and royal purple velvet, beautifully wrought with gold and silver bullion fringe. The regalia was made by J. A. Merrill & Co., Portland, and cost thirty dollars.

ART ASSOCIATION. The regular meeting of the Art Association was held last evening at the residence of Dr. E. F. Sanger, on First street. The attendance was large and the occasion much enjoyed by those present. The programme of exercises embraced a well executed piano solo by Mrs. Jewell, a very able and interesting paper on "Intensity in Art," by Prof. Bawes, of Bowdoin College, a beautiful song by Miss Cooke, very excellent readings by Mrs. W. H. S. Lawrence and songs by Mr. Lunt. The respective participants were greeted with generous applause. The place of holding the next meeting of the Association will be announced in due season. President Wheelwright officiated on the occasion and announced the exercises.

OBITUARY. Deacon Phillip Page died in Burlington, Me., on the evening of Feb. 21st. He had a paralytic attack on the Monday previous, from which he did not rally. He was born in Conway, N. H., in 1805, and when a young man removed with his father, the late Mr. Caleb Page, to what is now Lowell, and in a year or two after to Burlington, where he has lived for about fifty years. He was a gentleman well known to the older business men on Penobscot river. He was a deacon of the Congregational church, and took a large interest in everything that pertained to the welfare of all. He was thoroughly honest in every relation and business in life, a useful, honored and respected citizen, whose loss to the community is not to be easily filled. Mr. Page was twice married and leaves a widow and three sons to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father.

PERSONAL. A letter from Washington, D. C., in Eliot's Herald, of a recent date, is highly complimentary to Rev. M. W. Prince, of Bucksport, who during a recent visit to the National Capital preached at the Metropolitan M. E. church, of Washington. A portion of the letter is quoted below: "The sermon was full of vigorous thought, beautifully illustrated and full of the blessed unction of the Holy One. Bro. P. had his manuscript before him, but it did not stand as a wall between him and the people. There are few men who can preach the Gospel through a manuscript. Dr. Chalmers could, Dr. Townsend can, and in this respect our brother closely resembled these masters of pulpit oratory. We sincerely congratulate our friends in eastern Maine on having such a principal in the Seminary. The school should be overflowing with students."

GARLAND ITEMS., Last Tuesday Mr. Frank Pennington left one of his horses harnessed to his double sled while he got the other horse shod. The horse not being hitched, as he should have been, ran down by the mills, and opposite the furniture shop of Haskell & Oak, came in contact with a team driven by Will Haskell, piling him and horse and sleigh, by the side of the road. Mr. Haskell received no hurts, but the horse was badly cut in several places and the sleigh was stove up so much that it will hardly pay to repair it. There was a donation party at the residence of Rev. T. B. Thayer Thursday afternoon and evening, which was the 25th similar gathering since he was called to the pastorship of the Congregational Society in this place. The receipts were $43. Mr. Thayer received a short time since $24 from a donation at the Oliver district, where he holds Sunday afternoon meetings.

REMOVAL TO NEW FIELDS. Rev. G. N. Eldridge, pastor of the Union Street Methodist church, of this city, leaves within a fortnight for Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, where he is to settle over a church there. His wife has been in that vicinity for the past three months and her health has been greatly improved since her residence there. The retirement of Rev. Mr. Eldridge from his pastorate here and his departure from our city will be deeply regretted not only by the members of his society, but by all Bangor people who have met and had relations with him during his stay in this city. The reason that Mr. Eldridge transfers his labors to the distant West is on account of the ill health of his wife, which appears to be greatly benefited by the Wyoming climate. The pulpit of the Union Street Methodist church will be occupied until the Conference by Rev. M. W. Prince, Principal of the Bucksport Seminary.

NOMINATIONS BY THE GOVERNOR. The following nominations have been made by Governor Robie; Justices of the Peace and Quorum—Charles Walker, Biddeford; D. D. Stewart, St. Albans; Wm. B. Preble, Cranberry Isle; Augustus Cogswell, Washington; George W. Norton, Eastport; Albert M. Nash, Harrington; John Otis Bristol, Chas. B. Benson, Paris; J. C. White, Lewiston; A. W. THE M. E. FESTIVAL AT CITY HALL. The fair, which opened so successfully on Thursday under the auspices of the First Methodist Society, continued at City Hall through yesterday, coming to a very satisfactory close in the evening. During the afternoon the sales of fancy articles were large. At supper time, refreshments were served to a considerable number and the attendance at the entertainment which followed was excellent. The exhibition of Rogers Statuary was an entertaining feature, the explanations being given by Mr. Dunbar and the calcium light being under Mr. Lovell's manipulation. The representations given were, "George Washington," "The Country Post Office," "School Days," "The Favored Scholar" and "The Referee." The above were interspersed with a song by Harry Springer; recitation, by Master Wheeler; song, "Sweet By and By," by Tens Green; piano duet, by Annie Wasgatt and Annie Goldthwait; song, by Mrs. Godfrey; cornet solo, by Mr. Dickey with piano accompaniment by Miss Jennie Dickey; piano duet, Mrs. J. B. Ayer and Miss Clergue. The entertainment closed with a Quaker song by Leslie and Grace Danforth. Refreshments were served before and after the entertainment and fancy articles were on sale during the evening. The fair has been well patronized and proved financially a success.

The Bangor Artillery in the Hampden Battle.

I have been told by one of the soldiers, a member of the Bangor Artillery, that Capt. Charles Hammond commanded his company at the Hampden battle and exhibited the greatest firmness and coolness, inspiring his men with his spirit of determination to give the enemy a taste of their iron in as rapid doses as could be given.

It was claimed that Gen. Blake, who was a veteran of the revolution, did not realize that the troops under him were entirely raw and unfit to meet double their number of the best English veteran troops and therefore did not take the precaution to throw up entrenchments, which ought to have been done the night previous. The attack was made during the forenoon, and a dense fog prevailed at the time enabling the English to flank our men by following a deep ravine, on one flank, at least, covering them entirely from the fire of our soldiers. Commander Morris, with his men from the U. S. ship of war Adams, had a long eighteen-pounder planted on the left of our force and he, with his men, worked this gun with great effectiveness. The Bangor Artillery were placed next to Commander Morris' gun and did their duty most nobly but were obliged to retire when the whole line broke and ran from the powerful, advancing, splendid English troops.

Two members of the Bangor Artillery would not leave their gun to be captured by the enemy, and being men of great strength they grasped the forward part of the gun carriage and bore it off triumphantly, while the English troops had gained the crest of the hill and were cheering over their victory, not offering to fire upon the two men who were tugging away with their gun. These men were Isaac Lincoln and George Savage. One of these men retained, afterward, a very favorable regard for the English, because, he said, they did not shoot him and his companion down, as they could easily have done being so near them. P.

SAD END OF AN UNHAPPY CAREER.

John Lyons Suicides by Taking Poison—This Close of a Life of Dissipation.

The report was afloat on the streets during the latter portion of last evening that John Lyons had taken poison. An investigation into the matter led to the substantiation of the rumor and to the discovery that death had already resulted.

Lyons and his wife have of late been boarding with the aunt of the latter on French street, near its intersection with Broadway. Between nine and ten o'clock, yesterday forenoon, he left the house and was not seen there again until about seven o'clock in the evening. It is supposed that in the vicinity of eight o'clock he took the fatal dose of arsenic and at twenty minutes past nine, life was extinct.

It is fully evident that he had determined to end his career and had made plans accordingly. During the day he called on numerous acquaintances down town and bid them good bye, remarking they would not see him again. Shortly after taking the poison his wife discovered him and he told her she would find written in a book in the room various desires regarding his effects, disposal of his body and other matters.

The deceased was a character well known in Bangor. He has led a hard and dissolute life, for some years run a saloon in this city and has more recently practised the vocation of gambling. Of late he has lost about everything he had and has been broken down in spirits, giving away to dissipation very heavily. His age was 42 years and he leaves a wife, but no children.

The White Slave.

The production of "The White Slave" through New England is a continuation of that brilliant succession of triumphs achieved by the Boston Theatre and which the present season thus comprised "The World," with its remarkable career, and "Youth," its grand success. The play will be given at the Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week, and the sale of seats will open Monday morning. Look out for a rush.

Esther.

Announcement appears in our advertising columns of the presentation of the sacred opera of "Esther" at the Opera House Monday and Tuesday evenings, March 5th and 6th, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. The cantata has been under rehearsal for a long time, and a very fine rendition is anticipated. Our citizens should encourage this endeavor on the part of home talent, by giving liberal patronage. The advance tickets are for sale at D. Bugbee & Co's.

Evenings with the Poets.

All who feel a just pride in the honored writers of our own land, and especially in our New England poets, Longfellow, Whittier and Lowell, will be pleased to learn that a course of three evenings with the above named poets will begin next Tuesday evening, at United Fellowship Hall (formerly Johnson's Hall). The course promises to be very interesting as an entertainment, and instructive in a literary sense. Each subject will be made up of various topics, the life, critiques upon the works, pleasant anecdotes, choice selections given as readings, and poems that have been set to music as songs. Some of our well-known school teachers and others will assist in presenting the topics. Tickets may be procured of E. H. Clark, Esq., and at D. Bugbee & Co. Prof. W. A. Rice, manager.

Sunday Services.

The brief lecture on the Parables at St. John's Episcopal church will continue for some time and are made interesting and instructive. They are preached without notes and are free to all.

Miss Barnicoat will speak at Johnson's

LEAR.

"I have come for a long talk, Octavia," she said. "I have much to say, and you have much to listen to. Where is my old friend our home-made couch? Oh, there it is, pushed away back in that dark corner. Octavia, how could you treat my handiwork with so little dignity?" Then she pulled away with her pretty hands until the couch with its worn chintz covering and cushions was placed to her liking in the broad window, and the comfortably established thereon. The warm golden beams of the setting sun rested lovingly on her sweet face.

"And so, my dear," I said with a sigh of content, for I was very glad to have my Jean home once more, after an absence of many weeks, "you are really engaged to be married. I only heard the rumor as true, the other day, and have waited for your own lips to tell me all about it, and as many of the secrets of love-making as you will consider to an old maid's ear."

"Oh, yes, I am engaged," she answered carelessly, "but, Octavia, if you are pining for love secrets, I have some to tell. Sure, you know as well as I do that it was all arranged long ago, before papa died. It was his dearest wish that I should marry the Baron von Stock, and abroad we are taught to obey our fathers, even though they die and leave us, and even without that we D'Orsays never break our word."

She said this simply and as a matter of course, taking off her rings one by one and making a little row of them on top of the couch. She was very young, only just seventeen, but there was a ring of proud truth in her voice that showed that she had learned her lesson well.

"Yes, I know, child," I answered with another sigh, not so tranquil as my former one, "only, you see, I can neither understand nor believe in such a keeping of one's word. Here, in America generally a girl marries, for one of two reasons, either because she loves, or because she is poor and needs a home. The latter can never be your case, then Jean do you love Baron Von Stock?"

Jean shrugged her shoulders. "He is fifty," she said, "and has gray hairs, and I am just seventeen, and you know, summer and winter can never agree. But I am a D'Orsay."

"I does not matter," she answered. "I do not believe in any such nonsense. Jean do you realize what you are giving up in marrying a man you do not love?"

"I think I do, Octavia."

"Is there then some one you do love, Jean?"

A long pause followed my question, during which Jean put on slowly the shining little circlets that belonged to her slim fingers. Then she said in a troubled voice:

"Octavia, that is just what I have come to tell you."

"Are you here, Madam Octavia, all alone in the gloaming? And may I come in?"

"Come in and welcome, Denis, but when did you arrive? Your last letter said nothing of your intention to return so soon. You were on your way to Florida, then. Did you weary of the sunny South, or were the Florida girls less winning and beautiful than you expected?"

"No and yes, Madam Octavia. As to the Florida girls, fortunately for me they did not make up my entire community, for I had other things to think about."

Denis crossed the long space, and now stood beside us where we sat in the quick coming shadows. I turned to Jean to make them known to one another.

"Jean," I said, "this is your original in my affection. Denis, this is your only competitor in my heart."

I had proceeded thus far, when I was taken out of my usual calm by a bitter gasping noise from among the cushions. Denis darted forward and to my utter dismay and astonishment, I saw him seize Jean's hands and cover them with eager kisses while he said in a broken voice:

"You believe me dear, why, I thought—I never knew you and Madame Octavia were friends."

Then Jean, frightened little voice:

"Oh please you must not. Oh, Octavia, tell Mr Durant all about it."

"Tell Mr Durant all about—" I echoed indeed I think it is you who should make an explanation to me."

And so by degrees they told me. It was the same old story that is forever and forever repeating itself. They had met and bonded some slight feeling into pleasure-seeking together until as a foregone conclusion they had come to love one another, and then—why then came Jean's summons home followed by her formal betroth to the Baron Von Stock.

"She never let me know, Madam Octavia," said poor Denis, "where she was going or why. Did she suppose I had her love so firmly won and so lightly lost? What! she is engaged to Baron von Stock, and bound by all the betrothals in christendom to do his master in the least. No guardian can dispose of a girl that way in this country. Jean I tell you it shall not be. Doubt you believe me, Jean?"

"Jean," I said at last, "surely there is no cause for all these tears. It is quite simple work. Denis says is more or less you the Baron will never hold you unwillingly to your word. Be frank with him my dear, it is always the best way to be honest."

"I do do not know," she answered lifting her tear-drenched face into the moonlight that now streamed in soft effulgence through the open window "what it means to us to have plighted our troth. It is only a very little less binding than a marriage vow and I above all others must not mean to be false. Why do you not know my dying father promised for me and I may not so lightly break my troth though I might my own."

And from this we could not move her. Denis was in despair and I not less moved. I loved these two children dearly and in my secret heart had cherished the hope, that they might one day become betrothed lovers and dearer than friends.

Jean replied on a little longer while. Denis held one unresisting hand, and the kindly shadows of the twilight May night wrapped us all in soft obscurity. Presently here came the sound of wheels and the tramping of horses in the quiet street below and then my little maid appeared with her lisping message.

So Jean dried her tears, put her hat over her dark ruffled hair, gave her hand calmly to Denis, kissed me hastily and then we were left alone. The horses pranced below and through the evening air came Jean's plaintive voice. Then the rolling wheels growing fainter in the distance, and then—silence.

"Denis," I said at length, "don't give her up."

"Don't give her up Madam Octavia," he replied "but what can I do? It is be that gives me up. What can I do?"

Go to her guardian, Mr Hayland, and tell him. If he has any remnant of youth left in his heart, he will try and help you."

This I said, not unmindful of Denis's good family good looks, and his great wealth. He brightened somewhat at this suggestion, and left me later on, more willing to see some hope for the future.

I did not see either of my children for some days after that evening, indeed, I think two weeks had gone by, but each day saw me so busily employed with my pupils and an amount of extra work, that I scarcely realized the flight of time.

One afternoon quite late, as I sat correcting a very much out of drawing study, Jean came in. I did not look up, but welcomed her from my easel; she came across the room silently, and stood before me without speaking.

"Well, my dear," I said, rubbing out a forearm with a bread, "it is a long time since you gladdened me with a sight of your winsome face."

Then, as she did not answer, I looked up. She was standing directly in front of me, with the light from the north window full upon her. Her dress was a long, soft, white mull, with a breast-knot of dark Russian violets, she held her hat in her hand, and her soft, dark hair lay slightly moist upon her forehead. But it was none of these accessories that drew from me the startled exclamation:

"Jean, what have you been doing to yourself?" For she was perfectly colorless with a pallor that betokened sleepless nights and restless days, while all the tiny blue veins about her temples were plainly visible, and beneath her sweet eyes were dark purple shadows. She gave a little laugh.

"Oh, nothing, Octavia, unless breaking one's heart can be called an occupation. I have been doing that."

"When you are very foolish," I said. "Why should you break your heart, and some one's else as well, when the remedy lies in your own hands?"

She made no answer at first, trifling in a nervous way with the feathers on her hat. Then in a troubled voice: "Is it Denis you mean, Octavia?"

"Who else should it be?" I answered. "Break your own heart if you will, child, but you might have spared my boy."

I spoke quickly and in temper, but I grieved when I had said it. The girl started as if wounded, and gave a long, deep sigh, though she answered consequently enough.

"Dear Madam Octavia, in deciding as I have, believe me, I have not spared myself, but I did not come to you to say so. I came because I am very miserable, and all alone, and because I am motherless and to ask you to give him—Denis—this, leaving a little note on the margin of my easel. And now I will say good-by, Octavia."

She left me before I could speak, with the same hurt look on her face and all that remained was the white note for Denis, and one or two violets that had fallen from her dress as she moved away.

A few more days passed by and Sunday morning as I sat over my latches and toast, the door opened, and Jean came in.

"Have you forgiven me, my dear?" I asked as I kissed her sweet mouth remembering my hard words a few evenings ago.

"Oh, indeed, Octavia I had nothing to forgive. Sure, if you may not speak your mind to me, who can? See I have brought you these white lilacs, Octavia. Baron von Stock gave me such a large bouquet yesterday and a note I thought of you and the dear quiet studio. You know I always need to keep the old place brightened up a bit."

Then as she separated the fragrant white flowers and arranged them in my two majolica vases, she asked me in a shy voice:

"Have you seen Denis, Octavia?"

"No my little Jean but I sent him your note."

"Did you read it Octavia?"

"My dear, no I noticed it was unsealed but fancied that an overseer of so I listened it up tight and sent it on its way. You did not tell me to read it Jean."

"I does not matter," she answered. Then after a little pause "It was only to tell him Octavia that Baron von Stock and Mr Hayland have decided it shall be on the 15th of June." I made no reply, though I knew it was her wedding-day, she chose to speak of so calmly.

She came and rested her hands upon my shoulders.

"You do not answer me Octavia. Are you then so indifferent?"

"My child I said since you have decided in your own heart what is best why should I reply?"

"Yes, that is true." Then kissing me "I have tried Octavia indeed I have to do all for the best. I love Denis—so now truly I do love him—but my word is pledged. What could do?"

"Nothing," I answered drily, "since you feel as you do."

And now it seemed to me the days fairly raced by in their eagerness to reach the 15th of June. I saw Denis frequently Jean less often. The boy was evidently wearing his first great sorrow. He would come and talk to me by the hour tramping up and down the sunny, ramblings of his fair hair and repeating over and over how much he loved her—how cruel it all was.

"Why doesn't she like Baron von Stock?" he said. "You don't suppose the man would force her to marry him against her will?"

"Why doing you tell him?" I answered. "How can I do that? Can I go and tell the Baron that I feel sure that Jean does not love him, and is only marrying him because of her father's stupid promise, and some absurd nonsense about the family honor? Don't be very serious, give my words the benefit. Do not I tell you all old Hayland and much good it did do. He smiled at me so blandly a possible and asked me if I came in Miss D'Orsay's request. Of course, I was obliged to say No. Then he smiled more blandly than before and said (When Miss D'Orsay comes to me with the same petition I will consider it. Was there anything else for me to do? In like myself off after that?

"Now—let—continued Denis—you are fond of me you know and I can depend on you to help me to do me a good turn. Jean will be here and I must see her before the 15th. Would you get her here next Sunday afternoon and then let me come in quite by accident? You will would you?

"Denis Durant" I said solemnly "since you were a curly headed boy I have never refused you anything it was my power to grant. Am I likely to do so now? Yes you shall have one more chance I will ask Jean to come. And now be off my six young lads will be here in half an hour, and I shall lose my position if they eat all of your handsome fruit."

"Pass me off as your model as I am, prodently," then coming back and bending his yellow head down caressingly "You will make her come, Octavia?"

"Yes, yes," I answered, touching his bright locks, "do not fear you shall see her once more."

This was Wednesday, the 5th of June, in ten days Jean was to be married. I wrote her a note asking her to come to me on Sunday. She sent me word she would be with me at five o'clock in the afternoon, at six Baron von Stock would call to take her to dine at his estate where his relations were to meet her for the first time collectively.

Sunday came one of those sudden intensely warm days, a foretaste of what July and August would prove. After my rather lardy luncheon I drew the mid chintz couch across the broad window, placed my low chair near it, closed the Venetian blinds and waited for my love.

Denis came first, putting in his head cautiously and then advancing eagerly when he saw I was alone.

"Will she come Octavia? Am I too late?"

"She will come," I answered and even as I made reply, I heard her step upon the stairs. Denis drew back in the window, a moment, and then the door was slowly opened and Jean came in. She walked down the long room, and we two watched her as she came. She was already dressed for dinner, in a long, soft, white silk, made very simply, with some rich old lace at the throat, and short, hanging sleeves. Her breast-knot was of the favorite dark Russian violets; her wavy brown hair knotted in same old-fashioned style upon the top of her proud little head, and held there by a quaint silver comb in her hands she carried her white hat and her long, white silk mitten. Save for the deep blue of the violets, there was not a ray of color about her, and her face was as white as her gown.

I put out my hands to her as she drew near me, she took them in hers and, bending, kissed me twice. "You dear Octavia," she said, "how cool and calm and happy you look here. I never come that it does not do me good, and yet I always leave with a heaviness. Do you ever feel so sorrowful after you see me, Octavia?"

"My little Jean, I am very glad. You do not come so often now, my dear, and I miss you very much."

"It is not my fault that keeps me away, Octavia," she said, taking one of her foreign idioms, "but my weakness. I dare not come for every time I do, my courage wanes fainter. You and the old studio are so full of pleasant, dear memories, and—of—him."

"Jean, Jean, my darling!" cried Denis, coming forth from his hiding and taking both her hands in his.

"Are you here?" she cried. Then beginning to tremble a little, and in a low voice, with now and then a sob. "Oh, Denis, you should not! Octavia, why did you let him come? Oh, my dear, dear Denis!"

It was all very, very sad. Jean stood there in her white gleaming drapery, sobbing, with Denis holding her hands in his, entreating her in soothing tones to listen to the love in his heart, their heads.

"I cannot," she said finally. "Oh, let me I cannot."

"Then you do not love me," cried he hotly.

"Love you," she answered, "Ah you do not know how I love you. I love you more earnestly, more deeply, than it is possible for you to understand. But, oh! don't you see! it is not my promise I have long, it is my father's. It will not greatly matter if my heart is broken," she added a little wildly, "so our honor is kept clean."

For a few moments there was silence, then from out the gloom far down the long studio, came a voice:

"Jean, mein liebling, art thou ready for me? Pardon, madame, that I intrude myself upon you."

Baron von Stock walked into our midst, and there was Jean crying, and Denis holding both her hands.

"But what is this," continued the Baron, turning his kind face from one to another. "Jean in tears! And you, sir," to Denis, "for what reason do you so hold Mademoiselle D'Orsay's hands?"

"For what reason?" cried Denis glad to speak to some one in his excitement, "for the best of all reasons, Baron von Stock because I love Jean, and she loves me. Don't you, my darling? Yes, I see her and you will take her from me, because of some stupid promise long ago made by a man dead these two years. You cannot be to marry you and she is not one to break her word. But, look you I tell you she loves me, and it will only be her hand she gives you, not her heart, that is mine."

The boy finished almost triumphantly, though he dropped Jean's hands and stood away from her. She said nothing.

"True that I love Denis? Yes it is quite true. I should have told you, Herman the day before our marriage, and I should also have told you, that I took your name, so I should wear it blameless on you. You have never asked me Baron Stock, whether or no I loved you, accepted my father's promise as done as I am willing to do."

As I watched the Baron, I saw a sudden look of happiness come over his face. Jean was speaking. Maybe it was then with his love to take her not only without love but knowing her heart belonged to another. It seemed so, for as she finished he went close to her and taking her hand raised it court courteously to his lips, bowing his gray head over it with infinite grace.

"That is quite as it should be, mein liebling, I am only too happy to possess your amiable respect. And now shall we go? It is already late."

So with a general bow and long my poor little Jean by the hand he left us. As the door closed, Denis gave the low cry and hid himself face down upon the couch. Nothing I could say would comfort him, he lay all the evening in dumb wretched misery while the dusk grew into night and one by one came the little stars and last of all the full round moon.

The 15th of June dawned in a cloud. I was up early too full of my child's new life that was to begin to-day. At rest so I reached Mr Hayland's office at 11 o'clock in the afternoon. I had a little note from her at mid-day begging me not to fail to come and closing at the end "Dear Octavia I am doing right although my heart seems dead. Baron Von Stock is very kind and saved soon be all bright and happy again indeed. I shall try and make his words true."

By four o'clock I was dressed in my best gray silk with a bunch of white lilac Jean had sent me. I was carefully drawing on my gloves and beginning to indulge mentally lest Denis should fail me at the last for he with a youthful desire to 'surprise' in his grief had declared it only manly and right to be at Jean's marriage besides being my duty to look after me. At half past five he made his appearance.

Oh Denis" I cried "how glad I am to see you. I feared, after all you might not come."

He laughed a sad bitter laugh not good to hear from so young a heart. "You should not fear Madam Octavia. If one can endure it, surely I can."

Then we betook ourselves to the carriage, and very soon were entering Mr Hayland's drawing rooms. There were gay with flowers and sweet June sunshine and bright with happy faces. Was ours the only heavy hearts in that small gathering?

We took our places, Denis and I two far from the white-robed marriage embroidered in roses which as Madame de Vaux informed me had been brought especially from Germany for the bride and groom to stand upon. An old old familiar scene you know, the whispered energetically and so interesting.

We had not long to wait here was a hush in the flow of voices as Baron von Stock entered and took his place followed immediately by Jean on Mr Hayland's arm. I did not look at Denis who stood beside me his face white. Very white and beautiful did my darling look though her falling veil of rich lace could not hide from me eyes the real lean beneath and I noted with sharp anguish that the sweet eyes were in one, and the other eyes more mournful than one short month ago. In deed too trust to her sad gentle looks were the too apparent joy not to say hilarity of both Baron von Stock and Mr Hayland. And now Jean had reached the last, old Mr Dillon stood by in surplice and stole and I was taking my last look at little Jean D'Orsay. She could tell my Jean no longer. The Baroness von Stock could never come to be old Jean cousin Dillon and looked longer with her freedom's sighing for home over every trifling pleasure or pain as he old years had done.

My tears were full of tender for Jean was the child of a widowed Lear, that had never known the sound of the magical word mother. Even Denis sorrow could not equal mine.

Baron von Stock's voice broke in upon my memories. "Mr Hayland, and my very good friends" he was saying "As you know, it was the earnest desire and solemn promise of my friend the late Count Alphonse D'Orsay that there should be a proper time exist between me Baron Hermann von Stock and his only child and daughter, Jean Blanche D'Orsay, the tie and contract of marriage. And so great was this desire, how ever unworthy the recipient of his bounty, that he instructed my dear daughter's generous heart the feeling that should she break his solemnly pledged word she would not only so I his honor but that of the D'Orsays whose face and lineage had never owned one member who had not kept it fair and clean. But to me he left discretionary powers, though he bound her so firmly, and should I, Hermann von Stock, desire at any time to cancel this mutual agreement, I was free to do so. I do so desire now. In the presence of you all, I give back to Mlle. D'Orsay her freedom, not from any want of appreciation of her beauty goodness and loyalty, rather because of them and that I am an old man, and my love for her is too great to accept the sacrifice of her youth. Jean mein liebling look up. See I have brought you a present, and we shall have a wedding after all."

When Jean raised her tear-dimmed eyes, it was Denis's face they rested on. Denis's hand that clasped so tightly her own.

"To you, my friend," said the Baron more merrily turning to the young man, "I say shield her faithfully, she who guards so carefully a dead father's honor will not fail to cherish that of her husband."

Denis bowed his bright head in silent thanksgiving. And so they were married. Often now on summer evenings, the dim old studio is full of the joyous laughter and prattling tongues of little Denis and little Jean, pretty Blanche and baby Hermann. And when the shadows grow longer and the little spirits less buoyant, they gather about my knee and beg, "Once more, just once more, tell us the story of mamma's wedding day.—The Argosy.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:
The undersigned, administrator of the estate of Mary Donohue, late of Bangor in said County, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are insufficient to pay her just debts and charges of administration.
Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him a license to sell and convey at public or private sale, and convey so much of the real estate of which said Mary Donohue died seized and possessed, including her late homestead, situate on Exchange street, for, on and after running from spring street down as far as Cumberland street, and being same described in a deed from Artemas Hoskins, to said Mary, dated July 11th, 1856, and recorded in Vol. 46, page 3, in the Registry of Deeds for said County of Penobscot, to which deed and the record thereof reference is made for a description of said premises so that the real estate of the deceased be subject to said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration.
Said real estate is the same described in a deed recorded in the Registry of Deeds for said County Vol. 46 page 3.
ANNIE E. DONOHUE.

A Good Odd Fellow.
Mr. Collier, of 31 Lyons St., New Haven, Conn., How he takes Kale Mary now and how he obtained the Arcana to Megaim his Health.
Mr. Collier of 31 Lyons St. is a faithful Odd Fellow and for over years a member of Quinnipiac Lodge No. 1 the oldest organization of its kind in the State of Conn. He is a man much respected in New Haven. Your reporter found him at his pleasant home on Lyons street one afternoon, taking his easy "You see," he says, "I'm trying to make myself feel a little independent. I presume it's the lingering results of a Lodge dinner which I attended a while ago down at the beach. I have been, as many of my friends in New Haven know, a sufferer for years from indigestion and biliousness. When I have indulged in the heavy food they had to suffer, at times extremely. As a result I've had to place myself under physicians care often, and I have taken a great many remedies but I find after a thorough trial that Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is the most excellent medicine I have ever used. I knowledge of for any of the disorders above mentioned. It cures to extraordinary effects, but rather the cleanses the entire organs in a charming manner. We keep it as a household medicine, and I have recommended it to my friends, for it is an excellent preparation."
Mr. Collier is a man whose word can be depended upon. His testimony is but a recital of the words of thousands in New England who have received relief from the sole use of Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY.
